

Everywhere I turn these days, there is someone trying to tell me who and what I am to listen to. I am so tired of this. I bought XM radio because I am sick and tired of the commercials and the constant jaw-jacking that is constantly on the radio. I want to listen to music, talk shows and whatever without the constant interruptions. I also bought XM radio because I can now travel without having to try and relocate a station when I travel out of range to the one that I was listening to. I am tired of big business using their clout to push out threats. This country is about free enterprise and competition. But instead of trying to win back support, it seems to me that the NAB would rather get rid of their competition. Don't let them tell me what I can or can't listen to. Don't let them force me to listen to their dribble. Instead force them to clean up and change their act. I want to be able to hear traffic and weather reports on a more timely basis, and not have to sit through a tirade of useless garbage waiting for the station to decide when they want me to know anything. Thank you.
